

TORY COUNCILLORS RUN A BROTHEL AT THEIR HOUSE

Family values? That'll be £100 for a romp say husband & wife

His website

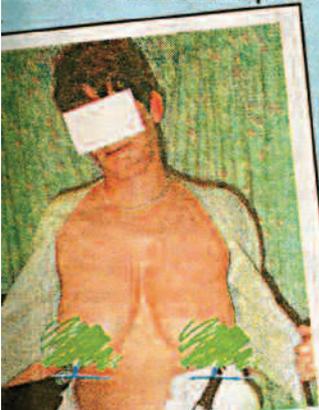

Her website

MADAM CHAIRMAN

£80 an hour... Cllr Carol at work.
Inset: Her official council photo

Upfront... the sex mag ad. We've put Tory logos on to spare blushes!

Their house in Wolverhampton

EXCLUSIVE

By NICK OWENS and ALISTAIR SELF

TO their loyal band of supporters – not to mention the Tory hierarchy – councillors David Bourne and wife Carol are pillars of the community.

As hard-working school governors they paint a perfect picture of the traditional family values David Cameron hopes will carry the Conservatives to victory at the next General Election.

But behind the velvet curtains of their immaculate two-bedroom end-of-terrace home at the end of a cul-de-sac there's something decidedly dodgy going on.

For £80 David, 66, will let you have sex with his wife Carol, 49. And for an extra £20 David, the assistant chairman of the local Conservative Association and governor of a Church of England school, will join in.

The couple even invite punters to film the hour-long sessions for £150 and take away their own "true blue" video as a souvenir.

The Bournes advertise their "services" in an adult magazine using the same contact number as their political website. Between dealing with grumbles about recycling council tax, they take bookings for group sex.

When our investigator called the number, David was quick to get down to business. He said: "It's £100 an hour for both of us or £80 if you just want the woman. Are you bisexual? If you are, we can do a threesome. Evenings and weekends only." Then, checking his diary, he added: "We are pretty busy right now...but we can squeeze you in."

When our investigator arrived at the house David answered the door. He led him through the hallway, with its bookcase full of encyclopaedias and books on gardening tips, and into the lounge. Then he poured himself a glass of Blossom Hill wine as Carol sat on their floral print sofa watching Coronation Street on TV. "Hasn't the weather been awful," she told our investigator.

David meanwhile flicked through a Reader's Digest and then complained about the economy under Labour. But it wasn't long before the talk turned to sex. He told our investigator: "We have an open relationship. I'm bisexual but if you just wanted to see Carol on her own, I wouldn't mind." Carol added: "You can have anything you want. We wouldn't get embarrassed."

Our investigator said he was unsure he wanted sex and David – a member of the council's Standards Committee – told him: "That is quite normal and natural. It is with a strange person who you don't know. Some people can accept that and some people can't." Our investigator then made his excuses and left.

When we confronted David with our video evidence last night he hid in his lounge and then said: "I am not talking to you today."

The Bournes' secret double life will be the home of Tory 'Family Values'!

WELCOME TO THE WEST MIDLANDS Mr CAMERON

Why do you want to cut inheritance tax for the richest when you won't do anything for anyone else?

When will you say sorry for your 'hug a hoodie' speech?

Will you make flying or driving more expensive?

When will you make a real pledge on cutting child poverty?

Why did you oppose the minimum wage?